Navigating the journey: Relationships and sexuality education

Te takahi i te ara: Te mātauranga mō ngā hononga tāngata me te hōkakatanga

This resource has been designed to help you navigate the journey of relationships and sexuality education (RSE) along with the tamaiti/tamariki in your life.

Your school has chosen to use Family Planning's resource Navigating the Journey: Relationships and Sexuality Education to assist with their delivery of a comprehensive, age-appropriate RSE programme. This resource was created alongside educational and health promotion experts to ensure that all of the material aligns with the Ministry of Education's guidance.

RSE is an important component of the health and physical education learning area of the curriculum. While some may see the word sexuality and think that this part of the curriculum is only relevant to older students, RSE is actually a comprehensive and holistic programme that covers many topics. For younger learners, these topics include life skills, identity, respect, friendships and feelings, as well as the biological topic such as body parts and how reproduction works. For older students, topics such as puberty, intimate relationships, contraceptives and sexually transmissible infections feature. In the following charts, you can see what topics will be covered in each year with the Navigating the Journey resource.

Family Planning encourages talking to your tamaiti/tamariki about relationships and sexuality from all parents, caregivers, and whānau. This should actively complement what is being talked about in the classroom, however, you may wish to talk to your tamaiti/tamariki before they have their RSE lessons in the classroom. To help you learn more and support you with these conversations at home, we have several resources available.

For a broad overview, you could check out our advice page on our website. We also have several resources available for download that provide information and activities that you can do in the home. These include:

You can also sign up for our Open and Honest Zoom session or encourage your school to organise an Open and Honest night for parents by contacting their local health promoter.
